And strengthen our team at Coherent.

The fascination of laser is moving to the next level. Modern laser systems are now an essential part of research & development, scientific applications, instrumentation and global production lines for innovative products in microelectronics, materials processing, solar technology and health care equipment. Microelectronic consumer products such as mobile phones, smartphones and LED TVs are impressive examples of products that are produced cost-effectively and being made more efficient through our lasers. Our success in these future markets is both our mission and our opportunity. We are meeting the rapidly growing demands of today – and already planning for the needs of tomorrow.

To strengthen the team in Goettingen, Germany we are looking for you to join us as early as possible as

Factory Support Engineer (m/f)

Optical/Laser Systems

Your responsibilities – concentrated:

After an extensive induction in the Factory Support Center, you will assume the installation and maintenance of our sophisticated systems for our clients in Europe and abroad, in particular in Asia. For large systems you will carry out the in-house tests and start-up operation on-site and brief clients on equipment operation. Furthermore, you will work on escalated service cases, develop corrective action plans and support, at the highest escalation level, the local on-site service for the prompt rectification of problems. You will update the relevant databanks and compile service reports. Your expertise and experience with clients will make a considerable contribution to the optimisation of our products.

Your capabilities – widely spread:

The position requires completed studies (university / university of applied sciences / technical university) in optics, laser technology, physical engineering, electrical engineering or mechanical engineering. Experience in customer service in sophisticated technical products would be an advantage. German skills would be beneficial for your work and you should be willing to travel extensively. You will coordinate and organise contacts to our clients as well as the cooperation with internal departments such as Product Management and Research and Development, in a goal orientated, assertive and tactful manner.
